

State Library Announces Research Library Move and Future Capitol Museum Expansion

In July 2017, the Arizona State Library, Archives and Public Records will begin relocating collections from the library space in the 1938 Addition of the Capitol to the Polly Rosenbaum Building adjacent to the state capitol complex.

The collection of the Research Library at the Capitol contains more than one million items, including legal materials, state publications, patent and trademark resources, and federal documents in its role as a Regional Federal Depository Library.

In keeping with the State Library's mission of "Providing Access, Preserving Arizona", this move will streamline public access to the library and archives collections in a single easily accessible location, while ensuring unique collections are preserved for the future. The full transition will take approximately one year; however, public services will not be interrupted, and Digital Arizona Library collections are always available online at www.azlibrary.gov/dazl.

Arizona Begins New Era of Records Management

The Secretary of State's office and Iron Mountain Inc. have teamed up to begin a new era in Arizona's records management program. By utilizing Iron Mountain's technology and multiple storage locations, the AZSOS Records Management Center will give state agencies and all public bodies a cost effective records management storage solution.

“This public / private partnership with Iron Mountain will enable our customers to protect and better use their information so they can keep stored data updated and easier to access 24/7,” said Secretary Reagan. “Combined with the enhanced security and reduced costs our state agencies can be more efficient while saving money.”
